WOLMANIZED PRESSURE-TREATED LUMBER

What Nature does for such fancy woods as Cypress, Redwood and Cedar, pressure-treatment with WOLMAN® preservative chemicals does for ordinary woods, such as Southern Yellow Pine, for considerably less money.

To achieve the state of pressure treatment necessary to be called Wolmanized, the dry yellow pine lumber is placed in a pressure cylinder. The cylinder is filled with Wolman preservative chemicals and then 150 p.s.i. of pressure is applied to force chemicals deep into the lumber.

- PERMANENCE— This procedure provides a permanence which makes yellow pine lumber last for decades — without impairing the natural beauty. Since it will not rot and termites can't destroy it, it can rightly be called the Outdoor Wood™.
- CLEANLINESS— Chemicals are permanently locked in the lumber and will not rub off on hands or clothing.
- NON-CORROSIVE— The chemical formation used in the pressure treatment process is non-corrosive. Because of this, imbedded metal such as nails or bolts are not harmed.
- PAINTABLE— Accepts paint or stain as well as untreated lumber.
